Data Extraction Challenges and Considerations

1. Language Processing: Most primary sources provide information in Traditional Chinese (ZH-HK), requiring proper character encoding and language processing capabilities.
2. Inconsistent Data Formats: Different platforms present event information in varying formats, making standardized extraction challenging.
3. Dynamic Content: Many sites use JavaScript to load content dynamically, requiring browser automation or API access for complete data extraction.
4. Limited API Access: Most platforms do not offer public APIs for data access, necessitating web scraping approaches.

5. Event Details Depth: While basic event information (date, location, title) is usually readily available, detailed information about participating companies and specific positions may require deeper navigation.
6. Frequency Considerations: Primary sources should be checked daily as they update frequently with new events, while secondary sources can be checked weekly.
7. Calendar Integration: When extracting data for Google Calendar integration, attention must be paid to proper formatting of date/time information and location details.
8. Mobile Optimization: Some sources are primarily designed for mobile access, which may affect scraping approaches.
9. Authentication Requirements: Some university career centers require student/alumni login for full access to event details.
10. Seasonal Variations: Job fair frequency varies throughout the year, with peak periods typically in January-February and September-October.
